TACOMA
A Farewell

Coming as a surprise to the students, faculty and supporters of the University of Puget Sound is the announcement of the resignation of Professor Thomas B. Scott, assistant to the president and head of the department of Political Science, and of his intention of taking up the practice of law on March 1st. Though the news comes as a shock to many of his friends, his departure from educational work is but a step in a carefully planned future in the law, and was made possible by his recent admittance to the bar of Washington, passing the state examinations with unusually high rank.

Professor Scott began his educational work in Canada, where he was born, graduating from the Minden Normal school of Ontario and following that by several years' experience in public school work. Later Professor Scott attended Grand Prairie Seminary at Onarga, Illinois, graduating there and matriculating at Northwestern, from which institution he received his B. S. in 1905. While at Northwestern he was known as one of the most popular undergraduates in the institution, being a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity, being chosen class orator for the senior class and being one of nine men in his class to be chosen for Delta, the senior honorary society. As an athlete he was

Jenny's Evening Song

In a little cove at the foot of two mountains, just a few feet above the river, and about a hundred yards from the water's edge, was a tiny log house. From over the mountains a winding trail came around the sloping garden patch to the rickety front gate. A few feet from the forlorn little gate, a flight of rough steps led up to the wide rustic porch of the cabin.

Inside the house a girl was busy getting dinner and as her busy feet flew, she flung out little snatches of song. Soon the meal was prepared, the tired, sorrowful father came from his work and the small brother from his play on the sandy bank. While they ate, the girl brought a smile to the careworn face and peals of laughter from little Billie.

Thus her life was busy caring for these two dear ones and Jenny was happy although she often longed to be with the great singers whose pictures she had seen.

Indeed, she would have ranked with the most beautiful for there was ease and grace in every movement of the slender figure. The shapely head was piled high with wavy golden brown hair, and below it from her face like the pink of the sea shell, beamed dancing blue eyes, a small nose, two dimples and a laughing little mouth.

One evening as the sun was sinking behind the mountain screen an old man rode slowly down the little trail. He stopped suddenly and listened; for he heard a sweet voice singing. It sounded to him like his daughter's voice, which had been silent so long. How he longed to see the singer. It seemed like it must be the same beloved daughter singing to him from the gates of Heaven. Just then Jenny, rowing a tiny skiff, came in sight and not being aware of a stranger's presence, continued her song as she tied up the little boat and ran lightly up the bank.

The old man followed her, tied his horse at the little gate and slowly climbed the rude steps. Jenny asked him to be seated on the rustic settee of the porch and went to the spring to get him a cold drink. Returning, she told him that her father would soon be home. So he waited, watching the girl as she flitted past the door busily preparing the evening meal.

Banquet

On the 22nd of February, the University of Puget Sound observed "All University Day" for the third time. The annual banquet was given at the Hotel Bonneville. A reception was held in the hotel parlor between 7:30 and 8:30 and then everyone found a place at one of the tables in the dining room.

The room was handsomely decorated with maroon streamers, brightened by the attractive tables with their center pieces of red carnations.

When everyone was comfortably seated the Juniors arose and, solemnly bowing to the guests, gave the good old Indian greeting "Klahowya." The Freshmen could not fully appreciate the meaning of it all, so they immediately struck up a clever little song which emphasized the fact that they were Freshmen, and no one had a chance to forget it all the rest of the evening. Then the rest of the classes caught the spirit of the occasion and sang songs and gave yells until the faculty and some of the visitors were obliged to take part. Even the two lonesome little Senior girls put forth creditable efforts to uphold the honor of their class without decreasing their dignity.

After every one had eaten a sufficient amount of the dainties set before them, Dr. Zeller introduced the toastmaster for the evening, Mr. Cole. It seemed that all of the speakers, as well as the toastmaster, had caught some of the prevailing enthusiasm and consequently every speech was short, spicy and instructive. At a very early hour on the morning of the twenty-third, the third annual banquet, the most successful social function of the whole year, was declared at an end with three rousing cheers for Dr. Zeller.

Y. M. C. A.

The fourth of a series on the relation of the college man to different subjects was given by Dr. Edward G. Ford on February 27, when he spoke on "The College Man's Relation to Himself."

In substance Dr. Ford said that a college man's relation to himself must first be one of earnestness. Without earnest endeavor nothing worth while can ever be accomplished. Secondly, his relationship to himself must be one of reality. A young man should know himself. He should develop a strong body as well as a vigorous mentality, nor should he neglect his spiritual development. These relationships should help him attain to the third, the ideal of competent Christian leadership. There are many ten thousand dollar jobs waiting for the man who turns them up by proving himself worthy. The drawing of water and hewing of wood is an honorable occupation but the college bred man should look to something higher—something that will bring out the best in him.

On Tuesday, March 5, the speaker that was engaged to give the address was not able to attend. The meeting was given over to discussion on the best way to conduct the Y. M. C. A. meeting for the coming year. Many valuable ideas were given that shall bear fruit in the near future. Let us boom the Y. M. C. A. fellows, and the cause for which it stands.

Luncheon

Perhaps no department of the University is more keenly alive nor accomplishing a more definite, practical work, than is that of Home Economics. A very popular part of the sophomore course is a series of breakfasts and luncheons which are given every two weeks and which must be planned and carried out by the members of the class.

Fortunate, indeed, were the five girls who received invitations for last Saturday luncheon. Miss Brown acted as hostess at a table dainty in its color scheme of pink and white. The luncheon was served in four courses by Miss Josephine Arnquist, as follows:

MENU

Oysters on Half Shell
Salmon Croquettes Tomatoes Sauce
Creamed Potatoes
Olives
Pineapple Salad Wafers
Angel Parfait Lady Fingers
Café Noir

The guests were Mrs. Elder, the Misses Berger, Wilkey, Rees and Ford.

Theta

I was standing idly in the upper hall when to my great surprise I heard a rush on the stairs. I asked the girls, who were tearing down the stairs, what they were after. One of them caught me and I was taken along with them to Mrs. Marsh's laboratory, where they made a raid on their new secretary, Ann Fry, who, becoming so interested in translating French with one of the sterner sex, had forgotten the dignity of her new office.

Without further disturbance the meeting was opened with a mandolin solo by Myra Ford. An interesting feature of the program was the responses to roll call with current events. A beautiful musical number was given in the duet "Caliph de Bagdad," by Mary Bonds and Dorothy West. An interesting and weird story was nicely told by Frances Thompson. Also a very amusing reading was given by Marguerite Munro. The program was concluded with the critic's report by Lyle Ford. There's an old saying which is always true, "Where there's a will, there's a way." Lyle certainly proved this to be true, for she wrote her notes on the cuff of her shirt waist because she had no paper.

Amphictyon

Some of the students are beginning to feel the force of that old adage "Never leave that till tomorrow which you can do today," for while the members of the other societies have been planning to visit and to learn more of the good work done by th's society, the Amphictyons have changed their time of meeting, and in the future will hold their regular session upon the same night upon which the other societies meet. The place of meeting will be the Y. W. C. A. rest room.

The program for the evening of February 27 was an enjoyable one, "An Evening With Washington." The paper upon the "Comparison of Lincoln and Washington," by Miss Carlsen, and the speech upon the "Life of Washington," by Mr. Gardner, were both excellent. One of the main numbers on the program next Tuesday evening is the debate upon that much debated question, "Resolved, that Theodore Roosevelt is justified in accepting the nomination for a third term."

H. C. S.

Tuesday evening, February 27, the H. C. S. gave a most enjoyable program. After a few numbers, consisting of music, readings and papers, the society convened in a session of the Kangaroo Court for the purpose of hearing the case against the prisoner, who had been accused of killing the Dormitory cat nine times until it was dead. A jury of young ladies was impanelled and the witnesses sworn in under suitable oath. Both sides of the case were ably presented, but the prosecuting attorney won by his logical argument and his eloquent style. A degree of uncertainty was lent to the trial by the mysterious disappearance of the prisoner from time to time, and it was also rumored that the prisoner tried to bribe the jury. Whether this was the case or not, it cannot be denied that the jury was somewhat biased in rendering its decision of guilty of murder in the third degree.

Philomathean

The literary and musical program rendered by the Philos February 27 was one of the best of the year thus far. The literary numbers represented a trip around the world, each paper dealing with a certain part of the trip, such as the embarkment, a visit in Pekin, the journey across Russia, etc. The papers were cleverly prepared, the serious and interesting facts being interspersed with humor enough to make the entire program delightful and instructive. The musical numbers, which always add so much to the life and interest of an entertainment, were of the usual pleasing and worthy type.

Y. W. C. A. News

The regular Tuesday noon meetings of the Y. W. C. A. have been especially interesting lately. On February 20 Mrs. Lane, of the First M. E. church, gave us a missionary talk on "China." She told us many interesting facts concerning the successful work carried on by Miss Hughes, the young missionary who worked for seven years in a city the size of Tacoma, being the only white person in the city during that time.

On the following Tuesday Miss Anna Fry, our new vice president, gave us a short talk in which she reminded us of our duties to "Our Y. W. C. A.," selecting as her topic, "Seek Ye First the Kingdom."

In the afternoon of February 28 the members of the old and new cabinets, together with their committees, met with their advisory board at the home of Mrs. Marsh. A most enjoyable time was spent by all. A brief yearly report was given by each officer and cabinet member, showing that a very successful year had just been completed. Miss Ford, in an appropriate manner, then turned her office over to our new president, Ruth Rees. After a "speech" by the latter, dainty refreshments were served. Then each committee sought her adviser and together they began the plans for the new year.

Ed Gebert visited University friends last Saturday. He is leaving for California about the first of April.

Messrs. Blandpied, Calkins and Walter Hart were chapel visitors February 29.

We are glad to see Mrs. Jones out again after an illness of several weeks.

Miss Eulah Utterback and Mr. Adin Marlatt were University visitors last week.

Thursday evening, February 29, Prof. and Mrs. Cummins informally entertained a group of University students. The professor and his wife are becoming noted for the good times they give their friends.

We wish to welcome to Puget Sound our new
During the last few weeks we have had ample opportunity to become better acquainted with the work of the various literary societies. Although some of us had our doubts as to the outcome of such a plan as the management of the "Trail" has carried out, we are forced to admit that among the members of the different societies there is a much more harmonious feeling than there seemed to be before. We appreciate each other much more.

Now it seems possible for us all, including the "barbs," to stand on common ground. It is time for us all to boost. The annual election for the officers of the Associated Students will soon be here. When the election comes off many will be the students who desire to vote for their choice, but they will be denied the privilege, perhaps only because of their indifference at this time. For only those holding membership cards will be entitled to vote. Come, students, do not give yourself cause for regret as long as it can be helped. At this time there are about seventy members of the Association, a number so small that it makes one ashamed to write it. Are you to blame? There may be society rivalry and class rivalry, but we must all stand back of our Student Association.

The chapel services, February 29, will long be remembered by the most of us. In the first place, the long expected football sweaters had arrived after much delay, and our patient team was duly rewarded. Prof. Scott presented the sweaters, speaking to the students for the last time before his departure for California. He complimented the boys on their work last fall and expressed his expectation of a winning team next year.

After three rousing cheers for the boys Prof. Davis, in behalf of the faculty, presented Prof. and Mrs. Scott with a beautiful casserole as a token of their friendship. Then followed Miss Miller with a gold watch fob, the gift of the student body. In answer Prof. Scott assured us that though he must leave the University yet he would always remember us and would often be with us in mind and in spirit when he could not be so in body. The exercises closed as we bade our departing friends farewell.

As students we feel it will be hard to find another to fill Prof. Scott's place. To know him was to admire and honor him. He was a true friend to all. As he takes up his new work we would voice our wish for his success.

U. P. S. ROBBED

Game Stolen on Our Own Floor

On Tuesday evening, February 20, our varsity basketball team met its first reverse of the season at the hands of the Bellingham Normal quintet and their coach, who refereed.

The score was close from start to finish. Bellingham got off with a rush and corralled six points before the varsity hoop-shooters woke up, but when they did they held their own for the rest of the half, which ended 18-12 in the visitors favor.

A little rest did our boys a lot of good. Before the game was resumed two minutes we overcame their lead. The referee had a new solution for every infraction of the rules regardless of his own precedents. Somehow or other the visitors got nineteen chances from the foul line to our six and four of those were called by Mills, the umpire.

A large crowd was out to see the game. Eight members of the faculty were present. Star playing kept the game on edge, especially such shots as Hostetter made from midfield and the magic team work of our whole quintet. Bellingham also had some long passes.

The last three minutes proved hair-raising. With the score 21-25 against us, our boys made a whirlwind finish and shot three baskets, but the referee could not see defeat so the last basket was not allowed. In a few seconds the whistle blew, allowing the Bellingham team, with their coach, to walk off with a 24-25 victory.

With a Desire to Win the City Championship

This issue goes to the press just too soon to get in our championship game with Whitworth. Dope has it that inasmuch as the Y. M. C. A. students defeated the High School and they in turn were defeated by the Y. M. C. A. Crescents, who were beaten by the first U. P. S. and Whitworth, the championship lies between the last two named.

The end of the basketball season is in sight. After the game with Whitworth another game with the Old Stars will be played for some kind of a championship and then the basketball will be hidden away for another year.

RUSS HALL AGAIN!

U. P. S. Secures Services of Veteran Coach Again for This Year

Baseball looks good from present indications. Hall is with us again and it means a winning team. Arthur Smith has been appointed assistant manager and has issued his first call for candidates.

Cup Presented

Due to the impulses and publicity given to cross-country running by Joe Bonds the Athletic Bureau has established another sport in the U. P. S.

A cup has been offered by a prominent jeweler of the city for the winner of two consecutive years. Each year three races will be run over a two-mile course. The high man will have his name engraved on the cup.

Any doubt as to the popularity of this sport or its recognition in the school as a beneficial exercise may be buried, for thirty-six candidates have entered, as many as ever turned out for football or baseball.

Manager Cottrell has signed up such athletes as Sutherland, whose chances look good. Horeid, who has the build, wind and stride to carry him home a winner. Percy Scott, who has run several times against such men as Riley and Crump. The husky football men are also turning out. Bonds and Tisch claim they can cover the distance under eleven minutes. Fred Thompson has also consented to grace the lists with his presence, which will undoubtedly add to the excitement of the race. Others who are possible dark horses are Murbach, Cummings, Campion, Decker, the Smith family and Flesher.

ANXIOUS HUNTERS

When I returned from school there was an air of trouble and anxiety about the house. I soon learned the cause of this: My small four-year-old sister was missing. My parents had searched the house from one end to the other; the barn had been explored thoroughly and no possible hiding place had not been diligently gone over. But Eleanor could not be found.

Perhaps she had wandered into the woods or maybe was at our nearest neighbor's, who lives over a mile away. But both these suppositions were

The Bright Boy

I asked a little 51-year-old boy just out from New York how old he was. He replied: "I'm not old at all. I'm nearly new."

Speaking of new things, our new spring goods are coming in now and they're awfully new and swell. I often think the reason every well-dressed man or woman likes to wear Klopfenstein & Co.'s goods is because we get the new things a season earlier than most stores in the West. We're going to show you every new thing this season that's shown in the swellest shops in New York. There's no doubt that New York is the real fashion center of the world for clothes, and I don't see why everyone doesn't wear clothes made in New York. No matter whether you live here or just dropped in on a visit, if you get your toggery at Klopfenstein & Conrad's store you'll get the very latest styles. The coats are a little shorter and the shoulders a little broader, the lapels a little longer and the trousers a little bigger at the bottom. The boys' suits are a little better and neater than ever. The Norfolk style of coat, cut with yoke, and a little longer than last year's, and the full knickerbocker trousers. But, man or boy, we're ready for you.

proved wrong; every foot of the small woods was gone over, and the neighbors for two miles around were visited.

I suggested to my father that may be the Swashes had kidnapped her, but a stern glance from him was enough to keep me speechless for hours. My mother was worried half to death, and it seemed to my childish mind that the sun would never again brighten our home circle. I wanted to get away from everything and cry my heart out, but I didn't dare make a sound. I lay on the dining-room floor, trying in vain to keep back the tears. The darkness under the table caused by the large table cloth hanging nearly to the floor seemed inviting, so I crawled under the table. My hands touched something warm and the next second I screamed in a shrill voice, "O mamma! Mamma! Here she is! Come quick!" For there lay my sister fast asleep, unconscious of all the trouble she was causing. So life at our house resumed again its pleasant course and we were all again happy and untroubled.

While the mighty audience was congregating in the Tacoma theater to hear America's most distinguished citizen, many of our student felt proud to see Webb and Billmyer enter with pomp and ceremony a box seat. They were greeted with a mighty cheer, to which they responded with graceful bows and appreciative smiles. Then the usher asked them to kindly withdraw their presence and go up higher—to nigger heaven, and make room for Bishop Keator and Superior Judge Chapman. "How are the Mighty Fallen!"

Return Game at Bellingham Almost Burn’d Their Gymnasium—Varsity Keeps Up Its Fire to the Last and Only Loses After a Tie Is Played Off

Friday afternoon, March 1, the varsity hoop-shooters played Bellingham on their own floor and lost 22-24. Bellingham got a lucky basket to start with, but we came back with three. The first half ended 10-6 in favor of the U. P. S.

The second division opened up badly. The Normal boys piled up ten more points to our four, and it took all but ten seconds of the time for the visitors to bring the tally up to 22-20 with themselves on the big end. In this ten seconds Bellingham tied it up and when they played off the tie Bellingham again defeated us by getting the next basket.

Presently the father returned, greeted the stranger and asked him with the hearty welcome of the mountaineer, to share with them the evening meal. The stranger accepted and after the meal was finished the two returned to the porch.

It was then the stranger told Jenny’s father that when he was but a youth he had loved Jenny’s mother and although she had never cared for him, he had always kept track of her and when he learned of the mother’s death, had come to see if he could not do something of service for Jenny, knowing that her parents were poor. The father told of Jenny’s ambition to be a great singer and how he had always wished that he might give her the opportunity.

After a long, quiet conversation, they called the girl to them and told her of their plans to give her the education she desired in music. Jenny, fairly dazed by what she had heard, stole away to the water’s edge to think. When she returned, from the depths of her heart she thanked the kind friend who had made possible what she thought would be the realization of her dream, but which was more her great success with her voice.

Mrs. Thompson—“Do you know you talk in your sleep, Fred?”

Mr. Thompson—“Do you begrudge me even those few words, dear?”

prominent in track and football, making the varsity for four years in succession.

From 1906-07 Professor Scott was instructor in pedagogy in Grand Prairie Seminary and from 1907-1910 was athletic director and field agent for Illinois Wesleyan University, attending at the same time the law school of Illinois Wesleyan and graduating with his L.L. B. in 1910. At Illinois Wesleyan he made a remarkable record as an athletic coach, but was even more successful as a financial agent, a fact recognized in the offer of over double his salary, on his leaving, should he remain at Illinois Wesleyan.

In July, 1910, Professor Scott came to Tacoma to represent the University as financial agent and teacher of political science, and the evidence of his labors is plentiful. As a teacher, he has been known as a broad, sane thinker, endowed with unusual legal knowledge and possessed of a practical grasp of problems familiar only to the man who lives in the thick of life's activities.

As a lecturer and public speaker, he has been equalled by few in his power to arouse and compel enthusiasm, to evoke approval of morally right ideas and secure support for the cause of Christian education. His practical experience among men, service in public and private school work, coupled with a generous optimism and unusual magnetism, have made it possible for him to bring his ideas to men in simple, clear and yet beautiful form understandable alike by the cultured and unlettered.

Few men in educational work in the Northwest have been so well known and popular as he and the future of the University of Puget Sound is his debtor in no small degree.

As an executive and business man his success has been most marked. He has through conservative and sound methods helped to place the University on a much more sane basis than hitherto and has in the raising of funds for the support of the institution been most successful. Thoroughness, caution and security coupled with keen vision and shrewd judgment have made his services invaluable to the University. Through his influence, more men of affairs and prominent business men have interested themselves in the University of Puget Sound than ever before in its history.

Professor Scott takes with him as he goes to his new vocation at Modesto, Cal., the best wishes of the trustees, faculty, students and friends of the institution who join in regret at his departure but who rejoice at the splendid future which seems assured him in his new work.
