In 1903 the U. P. S. put out a football team which, went thru the entire season without a single defeat, winning by her spectacular defeat of the University of Nevada the virtual championship of the Pacific Coast. The only other claimant to the title was the University of Washington which after stalling for three weeks, finally refused point blank to play the U. P. S. on the grounds that their men were out of condition.
A Bit of Invective
By Douglas Boyde.

One of the most brilliant men who ever stepped upon the U. P. S. campus was Douglas Boyde, who, as managing editor of the Maroon in 1910-11, was the life of the paper. His athletic reports have been unequaled in all the annals of our college paper. In one of the most bitter contests of the football season U. P. S. went down to defeat before the U. S. Sailors, Philadelphia. Boyde rose to unwonted eloguence in his report of the game. He begins with a paraphrase of Mark Antony's famous funeral oration. "Students, boosters, knockers! lend me your ears:—I will return them several days hence. I come to bury the past,—not to resurrect it. The scores that teams make live after them, but the finer points of the game are often interred with their bones." Then, goaded on to exasperation by the unbearable conduct of the Navy rooters, he concludes with the following impassioned invective.

"Just a few words about that Navy bunch. They were the candy kids with the loud lingo. Their yell-master was stupendous. He had a face like a cow. No doubt you know lots of people who always smile and look conscious when accused of having bovine eyes, but did you ever see a fellow with a whole face like a cow? This fellow was the answer. Every time he started a yell I thought of the Beef Trust and shuddered. He certainly had a sirloin steak expression. When the agony began there's no doubt but what they were the worst bunch of warblers that ever went after a chord. Every time a high note showed up they took it and wrung its neck without the least compunction. The melody never lived that they couldn't set back and they were buzzards when it comes to harmony. They were the worst bunch of warblers that ever caromed over the campus of our Know Works. When one yell leader got tired, there was another fellow who took his place. He wore his teeth parted in the middle and every time he opened his face his mouth looked like a garden fence with the gate missing. They had several long bottles of "pop" and insisted that each other soak it up as they wanted the bottles for souvenirs. The whole crowd of them danced around and gibbered like a bunch of dubs with unbottoned brains. We hope that we will not be called upon again to entertain this crowd."

The Man Who Laughs

The age of Puritanism is long since past. The time was when to smile in church was almost a crime and to laugh heartily anywhere was levity. Today, instead of being bound by Puritanical ideas of religion that would tend to keep us always serious, we are bound by the stress and pressure of business, and life has become so strenuous that we have little or no time for relaxation and some of us have almost forgotten how to laugh. I would try to teach a gospel of cheerfulness.

Three things principally keep us from being cheerful—hurry, worry and ill health. The first two are useless, and the third might sometimes have been avoided altogether and will always be helped by cheerfulness. Many a scowl has arisen from a disordered stomach and many a disordered stomach has come from scowling. We have our trials which, if we meet aright, are stimulating. To be serious does not tend to help matters. Scowls will not disperse the clouds, but to smile is to ignore them. You might remember to take an umbrella while you smile.

There are at least three kinds of smiles. There is the vacuous, idiotic smile of the fool—the loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind. There is the shrewd, ingratiating smile of the gold brick man and the book canvasser. And there is the hearty, whole-souled, genial grin of the man who looks you in the face with a clear conscience and laughs because he finds life worth living and his fellows lovable and because he sees still better things ahead.

If you are seeking a chum or a room-mate hitch up with an optimist. Find out how he laughs. Better is it to be stranded on an iceberg than to mate with a frigid soul. The girl with tears in her eyes that overflow at frequent intervals is not usually the most popular. The girl with the haughty, icy, supercilious air is often a wall flower. But she of the sunny disposition, with a laugh like the merry pealing of the bells at Christmas time, wins our admiration and, yes, our love. "Low, gurgling laughter, as sweet as the swallow's song in the south, and a ripple of dimples that, dancing, meet by the curves of a perfect mouth." Rain is a mighty good thing at times; snow is good for coasting; but we

THE ILIAD.
(Revised Edition)

Prolog.—To begin with, Ate was the goddess of mischief. She got her dander up when she wasn't invited to a wedding and glommed onto her chance of getting even with the bunch. She wanted to make them sit up and take notice so she soaked an apple of the yellow metal into the wedding bower. She had printed on it, "To the Peach." Hera, Aphrodite, Athena and several other lemons entered the contest to set up their claim to being the peach that should get the apple. Paris was studying art for art's sake on Mount Ida, so they got him to act as judge. They asked Zeno to officiate first but he had cold feet.

The goddesses hadn't got onto the idea of modern standards of ethics so each offered a bribe. Aphrodite promised him the swellest woman going, and he took her up. This made the other goddesses mad. Aphrodite took him down to see the most beautiful woman. Helen of Sparta, and then ditched him. Helen happened at that time to be married to Menelaus but the divorce courts were so slow that Paris didn't want to wait to go through the necessary red tape. Accordingly they eloped without consulting Menelaus. The Spartan flew off the handle at this breach of etiquette and gathered up all the sports in Greece in order to get his wife back.

Now the Trojans lived in a little burg with a high board fence around it, and the Greeks camped around the outside. They had a pretty good time and stayed there nine years. Agamemnon was the loud noise in the outfit but Achilles could put spots all over him when it came to swinging the big stick or winning prize-fights. Each of these geezers had a captive girl and then the story begins.

BOOK 1. Ag (short for Agamemnon) had the daughter of a priest of Apollo, and the old man wanted to get the girl. Ag told him to trot along and eat his cookies. The priest got up on his high horse and prayed to Apollo to prey on the Greeks. Achilles suggested that Ag had better be good and mind the priest. Ag got hot around the collar. He gave the priest his daughter but he made Achilles give him his girl. Achilles blubbered like a two-year-old and called on his mother for help. She told him to sulk and say mean things, but not to fight. He sat around growling but when no one was in sight he sang. "Father and mother pay all the bills."

His mother was going to ask Zeus to help in the scrap but he had gone off on a toot to Africa and shouldn't be back for twelve days. Thetis, the old woman chased up to Zeus at that time and made goo-goo eyes at him until he said he wanted to help but his wife wouldn't let him. Finally she got him to nod his promise when he thought Hera wasn't looking. When she came in he looked like any hen-pecked dub when he has been doing something contrary to his wife's orders. She sawed that something was up and asked him who he had been flirting with. He put on a brass front and told her she was too much of a mut to understand his plans and almost made her think he was boss of the household.

NOTE—The foregoing was not written in the English department, but was composed in answer to a question in a Greek examination. The rawness of the style doubtless arises from the fact that the author is a Freshman and we hope that his style will improve.—Editor.—Ralph Simpson, Maroon, Feb. '09.

A MODERN MELODRAMA.

From the shaded, mysterious spot in the garden where the sobs of the weeping willow joined in a soft symphony with the mournful fear that Ill's footsteps might be heard, he cautiously stooped, and walked across the lawn on his hands. Arrived at the ivied corner of the summer house he quietly lay down and gazed longingly at one of the windows in the great building before him—the window of his love, Angeline.

At that moment a slender young form glided from the summer house. It was, in all her pale beauty, Angeline. Horrors! In the darkness she placed her foot upon the face of her prostrate lover. So delicate and sensitive was her nature, however, that she instantly recognized those familiar features through the thin sole of her shoe. "It is Angeline," she breathed.

"I think so," replied he boldly. "Yet you might take a look and see, if you really cared." She flashed a dark lantern, and the rapier-like gleam traveled over his supple figure. Her face went white to her finger tips.

"Do not move, for your life," she whispered. "My father's fearful bulldog has fastened himself upon the tail of your coat. He is now asleep. If you waken him, we are lost."

"Fear not, darling," he replied, with that superb calmness which always distinguished him in moments of extreme danger. "I took the precaution of sitting down in a basin of arsenic before I started upon this perilous adventure—the brute is dead."—Tommy, Maroon, Jan. 1910.
THE CHAMPIONSHIP YEAR 1903.

Now that the football season has ended, the University of Puget Sound stands as high in football as any institution on the Pacific coast. In fact, so far as scores show, and they talk louder than anything else in football, Tacoma is at the top of the college 1st on the Coast. She defeated Idaho and Nevada by heavier scores than did Washington, and Nevada t'ed Stanford and beat Berkley, thus becoming South Coast champions.—Tacoma Ledger, Nov. 29, 1903.

(From the certified list of players sent to the University of Washington by President E. M. Randall and showing that no ringers were on the team.) Raymond E. Cook, ’07 right end; John Olsan, ’07 right tackle; Andrew Marker, right guard; Clyde Nelson, center; Clinton H. Medcalf, ’04 left guard; Ralph Rader, left tackle; Jo Craig, left end; Paul W. Beach, (capt.) quarter; Alvia G. Nace, left half; David G. Williams, right half; Paul Rader (student coach) full back. Substitutes—George E. McMasters, John Anderson, Edwin Pittmon, ’04, Max We'chbrod, Jasper Noyes, R. Bruce Robbins.

The Sweaters.

"The sweaters are pure white with a beautiful maroon "P". The significance which attaches to them as the first sweaters ever awarded by the institution, and also as they commemorate the virtual winning of the Pacific Coast championship, make them dearly prized by the possessors."—Maroon, Feb. 1904.

THE BACK NUMBER.

The editor has had it in mind for some time to publish a "Back Number." But it has only come about as the result of much toil. The entire staff has labored strenuously for the last three weeks to read the mass of old "Maroons" and select material for the present issue. The athletic summary alone represents four days of toil. For most of the data had to be obtained from the files of the daily Ledger. The editor has distinct and painful recollections of searching through some 1300 to 1500 sporting pages. Perhaps the result has not justified the toil. But at any rate we hope that you will enjoy this fleeting glance into the vistas of the past.

CONCENTRATION.

Concentration and renunciation are words that should be written large in the vocabulary of every student. The one great prudence in college life is concentration. It is the serviceable, safe, certain, remunerative, sovereign quality. The student should know only one street between his home and his school. He should renounce the subsidiary and irrelevant, and spill down his soul into his studies. One hour of intense application is better than a day of mental meandering. The same force that plumps a projectile through an armored ship only spatters a charge of grape shot against its side. The essential function of education is to train the mind to marshal and discipline its scattered energies, and he who has learned to hurl his supreme strength at one point has learned the wisdom of the mightiest master of victory. The demand of the times is for men who can do things with dexterity and dispatch, men whose minds have the energy and flash of an electric current. Only those whose faculties are trained to intense and precise application are effectively equipped for the exacting exigencies of the day.—Andrew Marker, editor, Vol. 1, 1903-4.

Echoes From Summer Conferences.

As a demonstration of the joy of service, Gearhart is absolutely wonderful. To realize that it is possible to "remember Jesus Christ" in pastime as well as worship is worth the entire cost of the trip.—Gilbert Le Sourd, '08.

It has been two years since I went to a summer conference, but I still have a vivid impression of everything there. Besides the immense value I received from the Conferences, platform meetings, classes and sports, which is beyond comprehension, the private conversations I had with the leaders were of inestimable value to me. That alone has been worth double the expense and time of my Gearhart trip.—Walter A. Reynolds.

A girl was sitting with her Bible upon the overturned trunk of a tree, just above the rocks upon which the breakers are constantly dashing with their mighty power, and then sweeping back into the great, wide ocean. And there in the background was the mighty forest, with the wind whistling through the trees. Is this not a place to draw closer to the Maker of all these gifts and to your Master? Does it not make you want to be the

FRESHIES AND SOPHS SCRAP
They tried to tie Dan Dupertuis to the flagpole, those Freshies did, and that is what started the fun. It was Wednesday morning as they came from chapel. Half a dozen Freshies hustled him away, amid his hearty protest, to the flagpole in front. It was only a matter of a little while until Soph and Freshie were rolling on the campus in real football style. The parties, however, went at it a little timid at first for a real acquaintance had not yet been formed.

Gathered around by this time were all the student body, yes and most of the faculty. Shouts of all kinds were soon heard. "Tie 'em up!" "Get me a clothes line," "Tie 'em with your belts" and a hundred other phrases burst from the throats of the onlookers.

They needed no encouragement for now nearly every boy from both classes was there with coat off and nerves keyed to the highest, for this was the actual breaking out of the smouldering volcano. For days there had been much parley and many jibes and now was the climax.

Getting systematic, the Freshies delegated two men, if needed to hold down one Soph, and the extra Freshies did the binding act. Things were working well and after about thirty minutes of the roughest house the U. campus has seen, four of the stalwart Sophs were laid out with feet and hands tied.

Then recruits came for the Sophs from an unsus-
The girls, upon seeing their classmates being overpowered by greater numbers and feeling that it was a class scrap, secured penknives and slipping up cut the ropes which held the Sophs. This was accomplished so slyly that the Freshies were taken by surprise. Soon the rope ran out, for the girls had taken all they could find. The Freshies sent word for their girls but no response came from that quarter. Taking off their belts the Freshies began again to tie up their captives. When just about half done there came another surprise in the form of water. Those Soph girls had secured about 40 feet of hose and attaching it had turned it on full force and straight into the face of their opponents.

What to do next was a question with the Freshies, for they were too gallant to roughly use the girls and their own girls had not appeared. Three-quarters of an hour had already passed. Under present conditions it seemed useless to continue longer in the mix-up. They untied those who had been strapped and all together they went to the washroom to clean up.

The best of feelings were maintained throughout, not one fellow got mad, nor played rougher than he need to gain his point. The girls carried water to the thirsty contestants and in the midst of the scrap Weaver cried out, “Bring me a doughnut, I’m getting hungry.” As to who came out best there is much difference of opinion; but as to the quality of the scrap there is no doubt that it outclassed any.

Again has the H. C. S. brought honor and glory to our University and herself. "She came; she saw, and she conquered." February 19 at Whitworth College the H. C. S. fought the battle royal with Whitworth club in debate. Rossman and Paul, of the Whitworth club, ably defended the negative side but Cuddy and Le Sourd showed that we had not misplaced the confidence we had placed in them.
The question was: "Resolved, that Congress should degate the power to fix and determine railroad rates to a commission or bureau whose acts shall be of their own force effective."

On March 7th Mr. Warren Cuddy brought another trophy to the H. C. S. by winning the local temperance contest. Mr. Cuddy is an orator of no mean ability, and we are proud of him. Mr. Gilbert Le Sourd, who has a bright outlook for success in oratory, was our other representative.—Alta Hath-

THE MAN WHO LAUGHS.

like the sunshine to predominate. The glories of the summer day are best.

The man who laughs is a public benefactor. Mark Twain has preached better and more effective sermons than many an ordained minister. Have you never been in a gathering where there was an icy stillness, no life or merriment manifested? Someone has come in with a good story, a laugh has followed and the ice has been broken. When you hear a genuinely humorous story cherish it as you would a precious jewel, but do not hide it in a napkin. Few of us are humorists, but most of us can tell a story and it is worth while if we have to memorize it, word for word.

We were meant to be happy and we can make our own happiness. How much we have to be thankful for, and yet we grunt complainingly! Epictetus, the slave, teaches us the lesson. “Look at me,” he says, “who am with out a city, without a house, without possessions; I sleep on the ground; I have no wife, no children, no praetorium but the earth and the heavens and one poor cloak, and what do I want? Am I not without sorrow? Am I not without fear? Did I ever blame God or man? Did any of you ever see me with a sorrowful countenance? Oh, he is a brave man who can smile when his heart is breaking!”

Most of us feel that we would like to live as long as possible and it is a fact that laughter has a physiological effect upon our bodies. “Laughter is a most healthful exercise; it is one of the greatest helps to digestion with which I am acquainted,” says Dr. Hufeland. You little thought when you were having a hearty laugh that you were staving off dyspepsia, did you? It is a medicine that is cheap, pleasant, easy to take, effective and leaves no after ill effects. “Care to our coffin acids a nazi no doubt, and every grin so merry draws one out.”

You can’t afford not to laugh. Be an optimist. Yesterday was a great day, today is better, tomorrow will be the best. You will laugh at today’s little trouble tomorrow. Why not laugh at them today? Whatever you do, keep your troubles to yourself; and if you must tell somebody or bust—why, bust. You’ll do less harm. Share your joys with others, but in your sorrows be lonely but for the unseen company of Him who went through great temptation alone in the wilderness. I like Mrs. Wiggs. Her cherry homely philosophy has brightened life for many. One of her prayers has stayed by me: “Oh, Lord, whatever comes, keep me from getting sour.” It might well be our prayer. Throw off the scowl; aim high, work hard, look for the good and laugh.—Maroon, Vol. 6, April, 1909.

Here's the Job You Want

35,000
GOVERNMENT POSITIONS

NEW PARCEL POST WILL REQUIRE THOUSANDS MORE EMPLOYEES

The United States Civil Service will require the appointment of approximately 35,000 employees during the present year. The opportunities for positions in the Civil Service were never better.

Thousands of post-office clerks, mail carriers, railway mail clerks, rural free delivery carriers, etc., will be added to the service. The working force of the postal branch will be augmented as never before.

Civil Service positions are desirable because the hours for work are not too long, salaries are good and certain, and promotions are frequent.

PAY AS HIGH AS $1,000

The greater number of appointments will be made in the Post-Office Service, paying from $600 to $1,700 and more per year; the R. F. D. Service, paying $1,100 per year to standard routes; and the Railway Mail Service, paying from $900 to $1,800 per year.

If you are an American over 18 years old and can read and write you can make sure of appointment to one of these positions by study of an I. C. S. Civil Service Course.
