OLYMPIC GAMES DETERMINE BEST PLAYERS OF VARIOUS NATIONS

Soccer: The six international games played by all countries, except for the United States, were of particular interest. The most striking feature was the great number of nationalities that were represented. The games were also the best evidence of the growing influence of the United States on the field of soccer.

For even though a group of some eighteen teams entered the Olympic tournament, the actual number of participants was reduced to nine due to the withdrawal of some of the stronger teams. Nevertheless, the games were of great interest to sports enthusiasts, as they were held in the United States, where the sport is gaining increasing popularity.

The soccer teams of the United States, Mexico, and Canada were all represented in the tournament, as well as teams from Brazil, France, Germany, Italy, and Spain. The games were played in a series of matches, with the United States team emerging as the winner.

Frisbee: The first World Frisbee Championship was held in the United States, with teams from ten countries competing. The tournament was held in a series of matches, with the United States team emerging as the winner.

The Frisbee team of the United States was the only team competing in the event. The team was led by a group of twelve players, all of whom were professionals. The team was not only skilled, but also highly motivated, as they were determined to win the championship.

Tatums: The first Tatum was held in the United States, with teams from ten countries competing. The tournament was held in a series of matches, with the United States team emerging as the winner.

"Jack, a graduate."

"I'm not married."

"I am a man who understands," said the doctor, looking at his watch, "the power of suggestion."

"I'm sorry you married me," said the graduate, "I thought I was getting the idea."

"Are you enjoying your education?"

"Yes."

"How do we sympathize?"

Floyd: "What's going on?"

George: "The impossible? You want to know this?"

Luna: "No. Do you think you could give her what she's got her mind on?"

The man: "I'm not sure."

INCOME TAX RETURN CALLED FOR

Recent developments have been hard for the income tax return season. The filing of returns is still very slow according to the Internal Revenue, Bureau of Internal Revenue, and the Treasury Department. A number of taxpayers are not filing their returns, and many have not yet filed them. The number of returns filed is much smaller than in previous years. This is due to the fact that many taxpayers are now aware of the income tax law, and are therefore more likely to file their returns.
