Kings of Yell

When it comes to creating new nicknames, Brant Sorenson's first kings are on the job. Alzheimer's seems to be the phrase of the hour, as the Yell King has his own club and will also over the duties of that other title.

The Ox Woman

On an East Indian farm, where the crops is tea, a wooden plow turns up the rich black earth. A woman drives, another woman pulls—an ox or pulls beside her.

Six hours under a tropical sun, a bowl of cold rice—and six hours more. Then the woman and her bed of rushes, and the beast to his mud stall.

Tomorrow will be the same.

The American home has many conveniences. But many American women often work as hard as their Oriental sisters. They toil at the wash tub, carry water, they churn, by hand—all tasks which electricity can do for them at small cost, in half the time.

The labor-saving possibilities of electricity are constantly becoming more widely recognized. And the social significance of the release of the American woman from physical drudgery, through the increasing use of electricity in and about the home, will appeal instantly to every college man and woman.
