EVELYN BJORKEGAL REGAL QUEEN

Old Sol Makes Things Bright for Mayday, Though Early Morning Had Promised Rain; Music, Cager, and Youth Gave Colorful Program

A perfect May-day afternoon—blue sky, the warming sun almost at its zenith, a feeling of virility in every direction.

Notwithstanding this, the varying color of May-day—the groups standing about the college buildings provided the most attractive stage, covered with blue—white accents, flanked by huge banks of azaleas and rhododendrons, planted in the May-sale with tied ribbons, the colored strings weaving in the sunshine.

A trumpet call above the murmur of 800 voices—Freddie Smith, junior, solo, and paying the clarinet. The call echoes over the field of flowers and the beautiful group that lay far behind the stage. Boys—dressed in blue coats and white pants—appeared in the square formation, their flags, the platform and bonnet, in the approaching flower girls.

Winnifred Cogin—Coca Cola—should have been more than satisfied. Our college triumphs are never equal to our expectations because our ideals are so high and our chances for perfection are so limitless.

CURBSTONE OPINIONS by H. C. L.

THERE IS HOPE

And now we have driven
Our streamers and tears and garlands
Over o'er our heads again.
We have been caught
Like a fish out of water
In the glittering, gleaming
Bliss of the moment.
We have been seized upon
By the power of love
And perished in the attempt.
But when the play started we caught our breath with a

Weary, tired, discouraged, discouraged
In the toils of

The responsibility gets him in the toils of

The day.
All other activities, reaches a degree of perfection in their

Time beyond which

We have no hope.

There comes a time when one feels that

The end is near
And there is nothing to do but

Hope;

A time when one realizes that adventure is

Impossible to go.
