THE LIBRARY AND CIVILIZATION

The value of an immense number of volumes in our library cannot be overstated. In the old days students always gathered to form groups to discuss various books and topics available. Alexandria was the greatest cultural center because of the Egyptians, but Alexandria's riches were in books.

In the old days, there was no such thing as a library. Students read and studied in cafes and coffee shops. This method of learning was far more effective than the modern method of being rushed through a large amount of information. The old days were a more relaxed and enjoyable time.

NETHER IS KNOWLEDGE

One way of planning a large class is to give it a short examination each day. One professor in C. F. S. thought that the ability of the class was such that the examination was unimportant. This method might be used by other professors in their classes to determine the abilities of their students.

A test can be given in several ways. Some instructors give a test at the beginning of the class to see what the students already know. Others give a test at the end of the class to see what the students have learned. Some instructors give a test in the middle of the class to see what the students have learned.

NOT ALL HY

There is a rather lamentable tendency to let things go as long as possible and be as accurate as possible. The results are far from accurate. There is a tendency to be lax in the administration of our classes. The results are far from accurate. There is a tendency to be lax in the administration of our classes.

BUILDINGS

In which You Take Pride

The new buildings, where class buildings and institutional structures are so often distinguished by their public form, flood lighting equipment serves to predominate the enjoyment of their beauty and to enhance pride in the institution. Such an application is made for the 16-foot500-foot company at South Dakota State—significant gift of an automobile. Electrically operated sounds' horn and bells and are heard in concerts. At night, bright light from General Electric floodlighting projectors casts an afterglow of splendid beauty down in the school colors and white. The front, as the tower is identified by the campus from a G-E airplane cutting the floodlighted dome.
