OOTER ALLEN

Yes, the College of Puget Sound has won cups and other trophies in various activities. Your criticism is justifiable for justifiable trophies should be displayed for everyone to see. At present, however, the College does not have a trophy case for those cups and pennants. Why? Why does not the college take action to preserve a handsome trophy to the school?

If you want to see any of the cups belonging to the Loggers, you will find them in the hands of the Business and the Field Secretary. Intramural cups, however, are in possession of the Intramural group and have been won. A few of the track pennants are to the Track office.

Loggers Try For Positions On Grid Squad

Football Men Enter Spring Practice to Shape Team For Next Season

With two weeks of strenuous practice under their belts, Logger aspirants for next fall's grid team are rapidly rounding into shape that indicates that the Ma-line and White team will be in the midst of the struggle for top honors in the Northwest Conference track.

The squad is rapidly adapting itself to the shift style of play, which will be used by the Loggers next season. In accordance with the latter part of this week, the gridders look to the switch of position and snap in execution in their practice.

The number of candidates at the practice varies from 20 to 25, among whom are most of last year's squad and several men who are planning to enter varsity to play their role in the spring in a big way. They are engaging in the spring training to become familiar with Coach Sandberg’s style of play. Among the new men out for the team are Tom Colbert and Fred Collins from West Seattle High School in Seattle, and Frank Bechler from Cleveland High School in Portland, Ore. Colbert is a candidate for a backfield position while Collins and Hopkins are in line counters. Collins handling a tackle and Hopkins a center. The Blue for this day are in position to be a consistent ground gaining forces for the Loggers next fall. He will have plenty of opposition from "Ocky" Johnson and C. H. Baker, however. Ken Roeske, who was shifted from center to tackle is showing up well. Tom Colbert, who is a natural fullback, is cut familiar to him as he played tackle some last season. Martin Schmidt, who was in last season's backfield because of leg injury, is making a bid for a首发 in the lineup and will press the veterans for their job.

The following quotations are excerpts from criticisms of the play, expounded by critics:

"If this be the real enemy is hate."

"The Enemy"

Students of the College of Puget Sound should look for-toward to tonight's and Saturday evening's entertainment with much anticipation. With "The Enemy" written by Channing Pollock, being presented as an all-college production in Jones
Hall, the entire college and a large number of townsmen will be present at either one or the other performances.

There is no need to write about the high standard of our college plays, for that fact is now well established and everyone appreciates the endeavors of The Campus Playwrights.

Many stories of the war have been written by ambitious authors, but none will compare to this work of art which Mr.
Pollock has formulated and produced. The author obtained his plot germ during the Spanish-American war and then spent
