Today's 'Tide' Has Variety of Creativity

What were the reactions of the students in the World War II era? How were they inspired to write of war? How can we gain a new perspective on the subject?

These are some of the questions that have been asked of the "Today's Tide" staff. What was the inspiration for this issue?

What do you think of the content?

INTERCOLLEGIATE

POEM

We never thought that here we'd be
Electrical chokers on our kind
Be ornaments so free of mud (some fear)
Then we are sure to get along in a hurry.
The Candidates for ward (we hope)
Will be elected–That's the deal.
The Orches have now pulled in their horse.
It's going to rain, predict our urns.

"You should have seen here 15 minutes ago!"–A professor at Notre Dame said reprovingly to a busy student. "Why, what happened?"–The skipper ought never answered.

The Family of the University of Iowa has proved a law prohibiting students from bringing their strep-tococci to class to take notes before noon.

The inside comes
On the last floor
Begging during our situation
On silent branches.
Then Days the battle cells in the mud
Leaving him in a complete fog
And then anxious.

Some of the more prominent complaints against the men of public university by the women of the following run as follows:

1. The men are tease; they institute "Truman".
2. They run out of gas more than on the way home.
3. They don't take a hint or call any more.
4. They expect the girls to stay home while they "take care".
5. They think they've won us over for the evening where they take us in.
6. They see things in Mills college girls that they don't do in us.
7. They call the girls "Babes," and, as a result, the men don't as well.
8. They realize that this is their chance to enhance their own reputation

A co-ed paradise! St. Lawrence university where the co-eds students are3d their evening's entertainment in bed.

One need complain she isn't the right girl and has
"Hi–Emily Trojan."

Men, don't go to Iowa to look for a wife! Sixty per cent there were headstrong at the Iowa Medical system and easy in the home economics class.

A University of Chicago professor gives us a chemical definition of woman:

"Woman is a member of the human family.

The prommers: Can be found where men exist.

Physical properties: Bald as nothing and may freeze at any moment.

Moral properties: Very improper but not used correctly.

Mental properties: Violent action when left alone by man.

While brighter and more capable to discern in the upper levels.

Scientific data that the average woman is virtually feet has increased tremendously within the last ten years, presumably an attempt to fill men's shoes.

The worst Iowa State college to 100% to recover the damage done by a bug invasion at a recent night football game. The game against the bug bully, causing all of them to turn in at night.

One this from the "Mississippi Valley". The story of a student who brought his mother to the university and was sheeting her down. The cold, old lady was anxious to show her how she she had something.

"Damn you, mother," said the man, "are our wonderful pole Finks?"

"Ah," said the old lady, "what could be finer than a good faithful pole?."

Guest Column

Editor of the Trial: It's important, but many of us are not so water-brashed and phlegmatic in the spirit that we can't get along with a little bit of liveness at the activities of the fraternities. We don't see the fun and advantage of letting the social snubs adequately dissolve the interest of personal to fill student body offices.

Perhaps we can't force the issue, but there are two movements of action open in us who are enabling of the strange situation. The first is to install a primary essay, where the student body will select its own officers.

The second course open to us perhaps ruder native. It consists in making more set less than appeal to the sense of fairness of the fraternity's. If they have any, they have appropriated a power over the student body. There is only so far moderns in that to bear on the entire situation, and we hereby invite that. And hating invoked that, the sense of sportsmanship, the sense of the student body as something other than the stooge of the fraternity. Being a small thing, by the way, let us see if anything happens.

Are they willing to relinquish this power? Will they voluntarily permit the student body to select its own officers? Am they so anxious of this chance to enhance their own reputation, that they are afraid to face the future?

Or are they intellectual coward?

Franklin Laram

Editor of the Truth: Once again it's time to shout off the campaign of the student body for the run this year. A. roaring off is to be made to eliminate the campaign this year. The representative committee with whom discussed the matter, however, are regarding me as a candidate for the office.

The president has the most important office, and the great responsibility of carrying forward the six years progress in the school. In addition to this, he must represent the student body on the athletic committee, and any number of his activities. I feel able to satisfy all these requirements and I have an intense interest in all parts of the school.

The principal consideration should be the candidate himself and his ability to carry forward these activities. His ability to carry forward the six years progress in the school. SANDERS WILL ASSUME TRACK COACHING POST

To the delight of Roy Sandberg, Iowa football and basketball mentor, has been added the head coaching6 assistantship at CPS. It was announced this morning by the administration, under whose direction and leadership of Professors Ralph Worley and O. F. Hite, who will assist him with this year's track and field aggregation.

The position of baseball coach, formerly held by Sandberg, has been turned over to Robert Zahn, a four-year baseball and football letterman at CPS. Spring football practice will be continued this season, since he interfaces too greatly with baseball and track schedules.

Nearly a score of candidates answered the first call for track turn last week. Coach Sandberg faces the task of building an almost entirely new team from a squad stripped by loss of lettermen, particularly in the field events, the squad. Sandberg will have next completed, track turnout, will be held daily at 3 o'clock. Until the new order book is made available for sale.
