Picasso Takes First At Beaux Arts Ball

Chinese dress was a strong favorite and cowboy styles ran a close second at the Beaux Arts Ball. The 300 guests were entertained in third floor studios of Jones Hall.

Ted Johnson provided music for dancing at the Hammond.

He also accompanied all the numbers in the entertainment.

Clara Kristofferson, sax; Picasso of song, sang "Give Me A Little Blues" and "I Love You So Much It Hurts Me".

Justin Ludvig came astride as an angel and played on her harp.

She played "Brumus Laity" and "Tange".

Other acts included: A quartet from Lincoln Jr. singing barber shop harmonies, Wurms Manli doing the bulw, Harry Hill with cow- boy songs, Maria Jean Paulrich playing fashion songs on her saxophone, and Finkle Ruppin selling Irish poetry in his Irish accent.

The judges chose Maxine Linder as the one with the best costume.

Maxine was wearing a hat and scenery costume by Eva Crissy.

Ruth Gordon and Ruth Reis- her, were named the best dressed girls. They received two pieces of jewelry from Christ Louisa & Beverly Johnson by March 31.

Aussie Film Next Classic Scheduled

Ned Cowan’s story of a "Fillet Momento" was presented last night, the third movie of Opp Film Circuit series.

The fourth, as usual, Thursday, is "The Overlanders." A hand-painting, 1924 documentary of a big cattle drive across the bushland, dams and rivers, a cattle drive was hand-drawn underwater—Leonard Dochterman was seen checking his pack at the clock room.

PLC Captures Bull in Tyro Tournament

More than 150 debaters descended upon CPS just Friday. They tricked in the Terry Hall and carried the Tyro staff out of its office (not usual).

Even so, only two-thirds showed up. So-called and in-well with some three students.

A good number of them made the finals, ten out of twenty.

CPS did well when Jack Rosenthal took first in interpretive reading, when John Ritchie took first in extemporaneous, and when Jack Rosenthal took first in impromptu—almost as well as Bryan Norton and Bill Kidd took second in the "Wade's Kid" debate, and Max Wetzler took second in the one-man debate.

As it came out, CPS trailed second place Oregon State by two points. PLC had the trophy playing war, Oregon College of Education, Oregon University, St. Martin's University (who had the bull last year), Lewis and Clark, Oregon State and its Varsity extension, Pacific, E. Beatle, U. College of the Pacific and Central, Rhino Harbor and Everett Junior Colleges.

Rosenthal Astounds Tacomaans

Wednesday night in the Temple Theatre Tacomaans sat up and took notice. Maxx Rosenthal, computer in residence at CPS did something that has seldom been accomplished in Tacoma, or in the Northwest. He conducted a completely successful program. It was an evening that will not soon be forgotten under his artistic guidance, has become an organization of artists.

Rosenthal's "Symphony No. 35 in D Major" led its stilly title and became a living, moving piece of work. From the first note played it was obvious that Mr. Rosenthal wish to have the upperhand. Under his baton, the group seemed to fuse into a single focused instrument—his band. Mr. Rosenthal played that instrument. Independence.

Guest artist for the performance was violinist Violent Olnsen. Her fine touch describes "flamenco" and "Schottische," and went with ornate instrumental renditions, the pro-

Critic Seys Holt Concert Successful by Bob Peterson

Unlike many artists, Miss Frances Holt, a CBS Music and Education Singer, provided a program that the audience could follow. Her singing was at once musical and lyrical, and her performance was perfectly balanced.

Miss Holt's voice is not a big voice. Aware of this, she gave full advantage to her voice and full time. She showed ability to create and portray a mood without physical pretension.

Especially notable in the program was the traditional French tune "La Cloche de Lune". It was乳房ing to hear her present it as just a tune, not converted into a difficult mixture of trills and vocalizations.

Aside from receiving training for intermediate or high school vocal work, Miss Holt is organized and has a director for a P. M. Lewis Los Angeles Army group.

Arranging in the program was George Suppan, pianist and Sam Stein of Miss Holt, she showed vocal ability and techniques. The different, Richard Zimmermann "Hummel" was performed seriously and without showmanship, but with professional polish.

Tony B. Rasmussen, CBS instructor in music, accompanied Miss Holt. His style and understanding were in happy evidence with each offering.
