What is University of Puget Sound?
Introduction
The Associated Students of the University of Puget Sound has provided a forum for the organization of clubs, student government and leadership for over one hundred years. Founded in 1903, this entirely student run organization has served the campus community well. ASUPS plans hundreds of events every year that have contributed to the experiences of each student on campus. This year, ASUPS executive branch consists of an impeccable group of students: Van Lang Pham (President), Chelsea Howes (Vice President), Charlie Meader (Director of Business Services), Chrissy Dupuis (Director of Public Relations), and Ed Eltorfer (Director of Technology Services).
"ASUPS provides a vehicle to assist Puget Sound students in using their power and expressing their voice. It brings members of our college community together, under similar causes, whether it be attending ASUPS sponsored lectures and events, or being a part of clubs and organizations. Through ASUPS, I have been able to get to know many student leaders on campus, foster relationships with campus faculty, administrators, and staff, as well as grow closer to those whom I work with everyday. ASUPS is an organization we are very fortunate to have at Puget Sound, and a tradition it feels great to be a part of."

- Carlie Meader [ASUPS Director of Business Services]

"Working for ASUPS is basically like being part of a family. There are a lot of good times to be had and we all learn a lot, but there are definitely some days where I’m sure we all wish we didn’t have to work with one-another. We’re all faced with difficult jobs and sometimes they get the better of us."

- Ed Altorfer [ASUPS Director of Technology Services]
While some are more present than others throughout the year, the University of Puget Sound has a wide range of medias that works throughout the year to bring the students different forms of entertainment, news, and history. The university employs different staffs to run a radio station, KUPS, a newspaper, the sometimes loved and sometimes hated Trail, a team of photographers, Photo Services, an audio-visual group, Praxis Imago, a student literature magazine, Crosscurrents, and other small organizations that produce their own works. Of course, there is also the yearbook, the Tamanawas! Hopefully all of you have seen their work or will see their work sometime in your career at the University of Puget Sound. Each and every one of these organizations brings their unique flare and entertainment to the students.
To all my fellow students and faculty,

Before I go and talk about the year, I first want to thank two groups of people.

First, I want to thank and congratulate the graduating class of 2007. All of you have done a lot as leaders, even those of you who may not think so. Every member of the senior class that I have met has given me new insight and help when confronted with orienting myself in the school’s system. All of you in some way have been role models or community leaders, and no matter what happens in the future, you will have reached out to someone and they will remember you.

After recognizing our graduating class, I also need to send out a word of praise to my staff and supporters who made this book possible. While some of my staff have come and gone since the beginning of my term as editor-in-chief, you are all the ones that deserve the credit for this book’s success. You all worked hard, whether the times were rough or going well, and I am honored to have worked with all of you. Also, I cannot simply end with thanking my staff while writing about this book’s success. Both Van Pham and Chelsea Howes have been with me since the beginning, coaching and encouraging me along the way. Both of you will be missed after graduation.

Throughout the time I have spent making this book, I have tried to answer the question, “What is the University of Puget Sound?” Well, the answer has not quite come to me yet, but I am sure that I have come close. The University of Puget Sound is a place where students can learn from the faculty and through personal accomplishments in a relaxed environment and pace. Also, it is a place where students can genuinely participate in controlling their own experience.

Cheers, Class of 2007. We all know what you’re doing on graduation night!

Sincerely,

Zachary D. Preefer

"Living off campus is surprisingly not that different from living on-campus ... if you have lived in Trimble or an on-campus house. You have your own private space, your room, to which you can do anything, and a set of public spaces you are supposed to keep in a condition acceptable to your housemates. As can be expected, the condition of the public spaces tends to cause tensions in an off-campus house. People have their own definitions of clean, which often do not match. Add a kitchen into the mix, and fireworks are sure to occur. Now, it normally will not come beautifully furnished with a bed of strange dimensions or a tiny desk, but it will hold all of that furniture and more if you chose to buy anything beyond the bare minimum necessary. Plus, you can even put nails in the wall without paying a ridiculous fee per hole at the end of the year. Living off-campus, however, has one arguably major drawback: you are not on-campus. This translates into a variety of small changes in your schedule. You cannot roll out of bed two minutes before class and make it to lecture on time, and rarely will you head home during that hour break between classes. Evening events become slightly less appealing simply because you either have to stay on-campus until the event or come back to school. Usually the latter is chosen in order to avoid having to eat at the SUB. The perk is that getting a little distance from campus puts you back out into a semblance of the real world. You have to deal with things a little more, and grow up a bit. Living off-campus is a nice baby step on the path to being an independent adult, and you get to do it while your parents are still paying for everything."

On campus housing is a great opportunity for students who are ready to move out of the closely monitored dorm life into a setting slightly more at ease, while still within close proximity to the University of Puget Sound Campus. Getting to class and grabbing some food is still at one’s fingertips.

And these aren't the only options for on-campus living. Outside of dorm life, themed living, and Greek Row, there are many possibilities whether the aesthetics, size of rooms, or location are most important to you. Plus, you can have any number of friends living with you (though 30 would be stretching it).

One of the many wonderful aspects the University of Puget Sound is the vast amount of musical opportunities available to almost any student. Ensembles range from pre-professional to pep band for sporting events, plus various vocal groups geared to the student's particular skill level. Some groups not pictured here include the Dorian Singers, Symphony Orchestra, University Chorale, Underground Jazz, and the String Orchestra. Many events are free or low cost and feature a variety of musical styles.

What defines education at the University of Puget Sound?

"Puget Sound is defined by the value it places on a liberal arts education and by its commitment to creating an environment for those who study here which fosters this kind of education. What makes Puget Sound special is the relational nature of the educational process. Faculty, staff, administrators and members of the board of Trustees work through their various positions to create a sense of community that encourages students to engage in a process that will cultivate their ability to think critically and to communicate that thinking clearly, whether it is expressed in written or oral form."

- Matthew Pickard, Math Department

I love the fact that students at UPS can graduate in four years, nearly fluent in Japanese or Chinese, having the opportunity to study in those countries, and with a strong liberal arts education grounded in the Asian tradition, if they choose. It's amazing!

- Professor Jonathan Stockdale, Religion Department
Economics

Professors Douglas Goodman, Wade Hands, Bruce Mann, Ross Singleton, and Kate Stirling, Associate Professors Karen Sable and Matthew Warning, and Assistant Professor Garret Milam

The Faculty of the Department of Economics seek to understand and explain how the economic world works. We engage in our own research and share the results of that understanding with our students. We help our students develop analytical skills as a solid basis for critical thinking. We offer a wide range of electives that allows students to explore many facets of economic life. Students emerge from our program with a deeper understanding of the human condition and the tools to make a difference. The typical economics graduate is distinguished by her scintillating wit, her effervescent personality and her sense that the “future is incandescent with possibility”.

Geology

The Geology program joins classroom instruction, laboratory research, and field studies while taking advantage of local and regional geologic locations. The Geology Department is continually broadening its fossil, mineral, rock, and map collections and has an array of equipment used for both instruction and research. Students who participate in the Geology program learn how to explore the natural world analytically and gain the tools to draw informed conclusions from their observations. Students also gain the ability to make educated decisions about issues such as resource use, natural disaster policy and hazardous waste disposal.

Professors Barry Goldstein and Michael Valentine, Associate Professor Jeffrey Tepper, Assistant Professor Travis Horton, and Instructor Kenneth Clark
Art

Professor John McCuistion, Associate Professor Michael Johnson, and Assistant Professors Krisztia Kotsis, Janet Marcarvage, Elise Richman, and Linda K. Williams.

It is the goal of the department that studio majors should be able to demonstrate a mastery of process, an understanding of the principles of design, familiarity with art history, and sensitivity to expression in visual language. Art history majors develop skills to analyze artwork from a wide range of cultures. This includes the study of methodology for analyzing art in the context of a particular civilization. Written work culminates in the presentation of a major paper that demonstrates the student’s ability to apply methods of research and analysis.

The Chemistry Department offers a broad-based curriculum designed to meet the needs of a variety of students, from those taking only one or two chemistry courses in order to broaden their liberal arts background to those majoring in chemistry in preparation for a career in the chemical sciences. It is approved by the American Chemical Society and offers degrees appropriate for students interested in careers in chemistry, medicine, dentistry, engineering, science teaching, or any other area where a scientific background would be valuable.

Professors William Dasher, John Hanson, Steven Neshyba, Kenneth Rousslang, and Thomas Rowland, and Assistant Professor Christine Smith, and Visiting Assistant Professors Daniel Burgard, James Kabrhel, and Jeffrey M. Root, and Instructor Timothy Hoyt.

Chemistry
Biology

Professors, Mary Rose Lamb, Wayne Rickoll, and Alexa Tullis, and Associate Professors, Alyce DeMarais, Joel Elliott, Susannah Hannaford, and Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, and Assistant Professors, Mark Martin, Leslie Saucedo and Stacey Weiss, and Visiting Assistant Professors Jennifer Burnaford, Christine Gray, and Peter Hodum, and Instructors Scotic Henderson and Joyce Tamashiro.

The Biology Department at UPS strives to give students a broad foundation in biology, from molecules to whole organisms to ecosystems. It has built the curriculum around this ideal, believing that it serves all biology majors well, regardless of whether their ultimate goal is to become a physician or a forest ranger. It strives to increase students' appreciation for the wonder of life on earth and instill in them a desire to learn more.

-Biology Department

Education

The School of Education offers undergraduate students guidance and instruction, advancing their paths to careers in elementary and secondary school teaching. The program provides a selection of majors and minors used to meet the student's individual interests in the field. The Education Department offers professional courses that are important for preparing students for admission into graduate teaching programs.

- Tamanawas Staff

Professors, Grace Kirchner, Christine Kline and John Woodward, and Associate Professors Terence Beck and Julian Edgoose, and Assistant Professors Frederick Hamel and Amy Ryken, and Visiting Assistant Professor Dixie Massey, and Instructors Elizabeth Gast, Barbara Holme, Heather A. Jaasko-Fisher, and Jennice King.
Communication

Professors Kristine Bartanen, Dexter Gordon, James Jasinski, A. Susan Owen and Raymond Preiss, and Associate Professors Derek Buescher, David Droge and Renee Houston, and Visiting Assistant Professor Karen E. Zediker

The Communication Studies Department analyzes social, political, institutional, human, and mediated dimensions of communication processes and practices. Each class provides students with an opportunity to learn how these practices create meaning, allow and disallow social interaction, and cooperate with institutional, cultural, political, and historical structures. Students develop strong critical and analytical thinking skills, as well as a profound curiosity surrounding the intricacies of human communication.

-Tamanawas Staff

Religion

A discipline studying the myths, symbols, rituals and moral systems of various theological practices, the Religion Department at the University of Puget Sound strives to aid students in understanding the nature and importance of the world’s dominant religious traditions. These ideas are explored in a historical context, and attempt to illuminate some of the great questions of human nature. Several individual traditions are studied to a greater degree, but various customs are studied comparatively to investigate their effects on the people who cultivated it.

-Tamanawas Staff

Professor Douglas Edwards and Associate Professor Stuart Smithers and Assistant Professors Greta G. Austin and Jonathan Stockdale and Visiting Associate Professor Elisabeth Benard
International Political Economy

Professors David Balaam and Michael Veseth, and Associate Professor Nick Kontogeorgopoulos, and Assistant Professor Bradford Dillman

The University of Puget Sound is a leading center for undergraduate study of International Political Economy. The International Political Economy Program offers a multidisciplinary approach to the study of modern society. International Political Economy encourages the integrated analysis of social problems and issues, using tools and methods of political science, economics, and sociology as informed by an understanding of history and tempered by appreciation of culture and cultural differences.

A multi-disciplinary program at UPS, the Gender Studies program addresses various issues of gender, sexuality, and culture as they intermix with race, class, ethnicity, regional identity, religion, and age. Through teaching such issues, students minoring in Gender studies develop critical understanding of these issues, and are able to apply this knowledge to work and life decisions.

Comparative Sociology

Professor Sunil Kukreja and Associate Professors Richard Anderson-Connolly, John Finney, and Margaret Nowak and Assistant Professor Monica C DeHart, Andrew Gardner, and Visiting Assistant Professor Leslie Bunnage and Elizabeth Petras

The Comparative Sociology Department at Puget Sound is rooted in two related disciplinary traditions--sociology and anthropology--which inform the curriculum in the department. Faculty members representing both disciplines share a fundamental concern for actively engaging students in critical comparative study of social and cultural phenomena.

Aww, the English Department... This group sure loves their books. From the works of William Shakespeare to the horror of Stephen King, these professors know what's going on. If you need help on a paper these are the people to see. They can tell you the difference between the quis and the quaes and the quods.

~Tamanawas Staff

Professors Michael Curley, Denise Despres, Peter Greenfield, Hans Ostrom and Florence R. Sandler. Assistant Professors George Erving, Tiffany Aldrich MacBain, Julie Christoph, Bill Kupinse, Priti Joshi, Susmita Mahato, Tamiko Nimura, Dolen Perkins-Valdez and Alison Tracy. Instructors Beverly Conner, Keith James, Julie Neff-Lippman, Ann Putnam and Mary Turnbull. Visiting Assistant Professors David Cho and Laurie Frankel

English
Foreign Language

Professors Kent Hooper, Michel Rocchi, David Tinsley, Harry Velez-Quinones, and Associate Professors Diane Kelley, Josefa Lago Grana, and Assistant Professors Oswaldo Estrada, Mark Harpring, Jan Leuchtenberger, and Visiting Assistant Professors Sandra Evans, Dana Flaskerud, and Emy E. Manini

The Foreign Language Department provides instruction in three European languages (German, French, and Spanish), two Asian languages (Chinese and Japanese) and Ancient Greek and Latin. Faculty members are specialists in the literature and culture of the language they teach and are either native or have spent considerable time in the language’s foreign countries. The program's curriculum is designed to increase students’ contact with their chosen language’s culture and history with an emphasis on literature from the country where the language is spoken.

- Tamanawas Staff

The Math and Computer Science Department offers instruction in support of non-math majors as well as math majors. Math majors are given the opportunity to work with faculty to develop their own individualized course of study depending on what they are most interested. Students learn the relevant history of mathematics and think about mathematics analytically. They gain the ability to apply their knowledge through experimentation and problem-solving. Students learn to think logically while formulating arguments and proofs.

Professors Robert Beezer, Martin Jackson, Robert Matthews, David Scott, Bryan Smith, and Associate Professors Sigrun Bodine, Bradley Richards, and Assistant Professors Randolph Benton, Andrew Nierman, Michael Z. Spivey, and Visiting Associate Professor Jennifer Quinn

Math and Computer Science
Philosophy

Professors William Beardsley, Douglas Cannon, and Paul Loeb, and Assistant Professors Ariela Tubert and Visiting Assistant Professor William Melanson

Philosophy is one of the oldest academic branches in the world. Aristotle and Plato were just two of the first philosophers that this department loves and cherishes. Cornel West, Lucius Outlaw and G. A. Cohen are a few of the more contemporary men they admire. This hardworking department loves its philosophers and we love them too!

~ Tamanawas Staff

The Department of Exercise Sciences enables students to understand the intricate relationships between work, physical activity, health, and human potential. The program, grounded in the science of human movement, accomplishes this by guiding students through information and values synthesized under numerous disciplines. Students develop critical thinking skills to analyze and comprehend a field of knowledge that is constantly increasing on a daily basis.

~ Tamanawas Staff

Professors Heidi Orloff and Barbara Warren, and Associate Professor Karim Ochosi and Assistant Professor Gary McCall
The Psychology Department provides education through an empirically-based understanding of thought, experience and behavior. Issues addressed in the curriculum focus on a comprehensive understanding of critical analysis of psychological theories, training in research, and the ethics embedded in current scientific approaches. Courses offer students the opportunity to strengthen their verbal skills, logical thinking skills and research skills. Students gain knowledge through courses focused on psychological methods, statistics, and laboratory courses.

Professors Barry Anton, Catherine Hale, Lisa Wood and Associate Professors Robin Foster, Mark Reinitz, and Carolyn Weiss, and Assistant Professor Kevin David and Visiting Assistant Professors Christopher Jones and Jill Nealey-Moore

Humanities
Director Robert Garratt, and Assistant Professor George Erving, and Committee William Barry, William Beardsley, Geoffrey Block, George Erving, Kent Hooper, Aislinn Melchior, Eric Orlin, Geoffrey Proehl, David Smith David Tinsley, Keith Ward, and Linda K. Williams

At UPS, the Humanities Department is uniquely interdisciplinary. Subject matter varies from the disciplines of literature, history, philosophy, religion, and art and music history. Each course investigates the lives and works of various figures whose creativity makes others comprehend "what it means to be human" (UPS website). Thus, students in the humanities program, in some way, shape, or form, attempt to answer just such a question: What makes us human?

Psychology
Environmental Studies

Director Karin Sable, Economics and Assistant Professors Travis Horton and Daniel Sherman

One of many interdisciplinary minors offered at the University of Puget Sound, the Environmental Studies program combines scientific, social scientific, and humanistic levels of environmental issues. The courses are locally and regionally focused, with a faculty who consider the program to be most effective when conjoined with work in another major area of study. Students become experts on a particular, current environmental issue through their studies, and work with advisors in multiple fields to gain the optimum educational experience.

-Tamanawas Staff

Theatre Arts

Theatre Arts offers courses and activities in which students learn to make, understand, and evaluate theatrical events. Majors, minors, and non-majors learn how to apply a wide range of skills and insights - acting, directing, producing, scenography, playwrighting, dramaturgy - to the theatre-making process. Theatre Arts students discover how to pursue a comprehensive education in the liberal arts through theatre making and a comprehensive education in theatre through the liberal arts.

Professor Geoffrey Proehl and Associate Professors John Rindo, Jacalyn Royce and Assistant Professor Kurt Walls

Theater Arts
History

Professors Suzanne Wilson Barnett, William Barry, William Breienbach, Nancy Bristow, John Lear, David Smith, and Theodore Taranovski, and Associate Professor Douglas Sackman, and Assistant Professor Katherine Smith, and Visiting Assistant Professor Ian Read

The History Department offers a wide range of courses for major and non-majors in Asian, Latin American, United States and European history. The history faculty possesses a wide range on interests from the Medieval to the Modern period and their expertise includes intellectual, social, environmental and political perspectives on the past. Members of the department are engaged in interesting research.

“... provides students with a unique and innovative business education that prepares them for success as leaders in a complex and dynamic global environment.”

The program of the School of Business and Leadership incorporates business fundamentals (management, marketing, finance, accounting, law, and ethics) while strengthening its ties to other academic units on campus to fulfill the overall mission of the liberal arts goals of the university.

Professors Keith Maxwell and James McCullough, and Associate Professors, Alva Butcher, and Lynda Livingston, Jeffrey Matthews and Paula Wilson, and Assistant Professors Lynnette Claire, Lisa Johnson, Susan M. Stewart and Nila Wiese, and Visiting Assistant Professor Neil Delisanti

Business Leadership
Politics and Government

Professors Karl Fields, William Haltom, Arpad Kadarkay, Donald Share and David Sousa, and Associate Professors Lisa Ferrari and Patrick O'Neil, and Assistant Professors Melissa Bass, Daniel Sherman, and Seth Weinberger, and Visiting Assistant Professor Andrew Ross

"The Department of Politics and Government: Helping to lower the campus GPA for over a generation."

The Department of Politics and Government aims to acquaint students with the theoretical and empirical aspects of political experience. It seeks to develop an intelligent awareness and understanding of the processes, structures, institutions, and ideas of politics. To enhance efforts toward attaining these objectives, the department has implemented a cohesive program of study for its majors, minors, and other interested students within the university community.

Physics

The Physics Department supports the university’s liberal arts emphasis by offering coursework for students interested in majoring in fields other than physics. The program educated students in the fundamental ideas and methods of physics and well as providing an atmosphere suited for scientific inquiry. The physics curriculum is focused on a modern approach that prepares students for careers in science. Students gain an understanding of the principles of mechanics, optics, electromagnetism, quantum mechanics, and relativity. Courses teach students how to be effective problem solvers and keen researchers in the field of physics.

Professors Gregory Elliott, James Evans, Andrew Rex and Alan Thorndike, and Assistant Professors Amelia G. VanEngen Spivey, and Rand Worland, and Visiting Assistant Professor James Bernhard Paul Weber
Physical Education

Director of Physical Education, Intercollegiate Athletics and Recreation
Amy Hackett

"The Physical Education program offers the general university student 40 different activity classes including fitness, recreational activities, sports skills, and dance. It is the goal of the program to promote the development and maintenance of physical fitness as a lifestyle through sport, recreational, and dance activities; to provide the understanding of the physiological importance in physical activity; to provide opportunities to develop one's level of concentration, discipline, and emotional control through skill development and competition; and to promote social interaction now and in the future through sport and recreational participation."

Contrary to popular conception, science and technology are not islands unto themselves. They are, in fact, linked to every other form of human experience, whether it's literature, philosophy, religion, art, economics, or social and political history. A unique interdisciplinary major at UPS, Science, Technology and Society provides classes that explore the connections between science and other aspects of humanity.

-Tamanawas Staff

Co-Directors James Evans and Mott Greene, and Assistant Professor Kristin Johnson, and Committee Douglas Cannon, Barry Goldstein, Wade Hands, Suzanne Holland, and Kristin Johnson

Science, Technology, and Society
Classics

Professors William Barry and David Lupher, and Associate Professor Eric Orlin, and Assistant Professor Aislinn Melchior

An interdisciplinary major, Classics encompasses the diverse aspects of language, literature, philosophy, history, and art of the Mediterranean area from 2000 BC to 500 AD. The department presents a wide range of courses, unified under the heading "classics," and each course offers an opportunity for students to investigate various cultural phenomena in which one can find the root of human experience. Today's literature, philosophy, and history in the making all reflect those of the classical era, thus making it an interesting department to study.

-Tamanawas Staff

"The School of Music is devoted to preparing students for successful careers in music and to the study of music as a subject in the liberal arts. With concerts and master classes, nine different ensembles, and many courses in the core curriculum, the School of Music plays a central role in the cultural offerings of the University. It is a place where great things happen." —School of Music

The School of Music offers a cultural and intellectual enrichment for students through music classes and performance study, and contributes to a creative environment on campus.

Log Jam 2006-2007

Log Jam 2006, held September 1st, entertained, informed, and involved basically the entire UPS campus. An event held to bring students up to date about the myriad of On-Campus clubs and activities occurring everyday here at UPS, Log Jam served as a launching point to make this year, 2006-2007, a year full of positive change and education. Plus, if you didn't want to get involved, there was tons of free food, entertainment, and plenty of sun to go around.
"We get to explore being in Washington and adjusting to a non-Hawaiian habitat together."

"At UPS, whatever you want to do, you can find it, and if you can't find it, you can make it."

Brittney Taoka
Member of Hui O Hawaii
"Clubs are a great way to meet new people"
Franny Gilman

"Being in clubs promotes awareness and community. You get to know people who are passionate about the same issues as you are, get involved with your school, and get students more active. Being involved makes a freshman like me feel like I can do something and make a difference on campus."

"The beard growing contest was fairly epic. I enjoyed Matt Hoffman's beard because it was ten times longer than any I could ever grow. The rest of the activities in the homecoming halftime celebration were great, but in comparison to Matt Hoffman's scruff, the rest of the games were complimentary.

The home course for the golf program is the Fircrest Golf Club, a top-rated private course with excellent practice facilities located just fifteen minutes from the University. Golf team members also have access to a state of the art golf range, Tacoma Firs Golf Center, located just a short distance from the Puget Sound campus. Tournaments and dual matches are played at many of the finest courses in the Pacific Northwest.
The University of Puget Sound sponsors golf teams for both men and women. The University is a member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III and the Northwest Conference. The conference is comprised of private colleges in the states of Washington and Oregon. Post-season opportunities are available through both of these associations for individuals and teams that qualify.

The golf program has a fall and spring season. Team qualifying and ranking matches are conducted during the fall season. In addition, the fall competitive schedule includes two tournaments and several dual matches. The spring schedule is comprised of four tournaments, several dual matches and the conference championships. The squad size for conference competitions consists of six players with the top four scores used for a team score.

The men’s and women’s golf teams have experienced considerable success over the past five years having won a combined total of thirteen tournaments, twelve individual tournament medalist honors, twelve Northwest Conference All-Conference players and one NCAA Division III National Tournament participant.

You will find Puget Sound to be an excellent place to continue your education and to pursue your golf interests. We place a high premium on students committed to their academic program while at the same time are interested in a competitive intercollegiate golf experience.

"The women's basketball team has a promising outlook this year. As a senior I have been a part of three other teams but this year is the most talented team I've been a part of in my 4 years at UPS. We have a dynamic mix of athletes that will make this year interesting as we compete for the Northwest Conference Title. The Logger women's basketball team of 2006-2007 will be exciting to watch with their signature intense defensive and overall team quickness." - Shelby Ramirez

"Being part of the women's cross country team this fall is exciting. We could challenge for the conference title (even take a trip to Nationals) and the team is young - we still have potential for growth and improvement."

On Campus Jobs:

Below: Students working at Diversions
Work is actually fun at UPS: Diversions is always packed with Loggers looking for their caffeine fix, good music, and a relaxed, up-beat atmosphere.

Above: Students Working in the SUB
Working not only provides students with a steady cash flow, but also opportunities to meet fellow Loggers whom they may have never encountered otherwise!

UPS has many on campus work opportunities- Go check out what you can do at the Career and Employment Services center year round in Howarth 101.

Workin' hard for their money!
UPS to me is all about choices. Choosing where you want to live, who your friends are, what to study. I've found that choices are tricky things though; having plenty of them is great when it comes to deciding what's for dinner, but so many choices of majors can make it harder to stick to just one or two. So basically, choices make it take longer for me to graduate. - Nicole Luizzu

So far, senior year has been a lot of reflection. I've spent a lot of time thinking about what I have learned and how I have grown as a person during my college experience. I also have reflected a lot on the utterly incomprehensible experiences I have had and will never have again....mainly because I promise myself to never be that stupid again. But, whatevs...senior year has been quite a trip. - Katie Azarow

Our Shining Star...

We are amazed at your accomplishments.
And now... graduation; who knows your future?
Certainly not us!
God gave you talent for many things.
What you do with that talent is your gift back to God.
This is your shining time!
Love... Mom & Dad

Way to go Jamie! We are so proud of you and your sister, Kimmi, hasn't been this excited since both of you climbed onto the Alaskan pipeline in 1995.
Congratulations, Mollyrose.
We love you, Mom, Dad and Ari.

"Possibly the greatest source of human happiness is in personal achievement." - Herbert Hoover
Another exciting chapter in your young life has concluded. There will be many more chapters that will be equally as exciting and fulfilling. We are so proud of you and all you have accomplished over the last four years. All the best life has to offer.
Love always, Dad, Mom and Amanda

We are so proud of your accomplishments and your many talents. As you take your next step and explore your options, we know you will succeed!

Love, Mom and Dad
