The Voyager

I know not where the white road leads.
On the blue hills are, but a man may have the sun for his friend.

And for his guide a star.
For here's no end to voyaging.

And, all the call of a bird. —Anonymous

Spiritual Hinges

"Any religion must answer the greatest crisis of the human soul."

And when you go to kiss them—well, it's just like grandad said:

Where I go to see my sweetheart every other day.

Yes, a mighty willing worker, but her common failing shows

Things have happened often that this tale might be unsung,

And then the doctor just prescribes, "Must leave the cherry out!

I prayed for her, "Oh Lord, be kind, and put the cherry back!

She showed me to a cushioned seat, then stumbled up the stair;
NATURAL WISH

FIRST KID—What's my sister got?
SECOND KID—What does she want?
FIRST KID—A new blouse.
SECOND KID—Will she wash it, then?
FIRST KID—Of course she will.
SECOND KID—What will she put it on?
FIRST KID—It's a secret.
SECOND KID—I want to see it, too.
FIRST KID—You can't look at anything that doesn't belong to you.
SECOND KID—Well, I don't care.
FIRST KID—Then you can't have it.
SECOND KID—But I want it.
FIRST KID—All right, you can have it, but you can't be allowed to wear it.
SECOND KID—Why not?
FIRST KID—Because it's expensive.
SECOND KID—I don't care.
FIRST KID—Then you can't have it.
SECOND KID—Oh, come on, I'll give you half.
FIRST KID—No, you won't.
SECOND KID—I'll give you a quarter.
FIRST KID—No, you won't.
SECOND KID—Well, I'll give you a dime.
FIRST KID—No, you won't.
SECOND KID—Well, I'll give you five cents.
FIRST KID—No, you won't.
SECOND KID—Well, I'll give you two cents.
FIRST KID—No, you won't.
SECOND KID—Oh, come on, I'll give you one cent.
FIRST KID—No, you won't.
SECOND KID—Well, I'll give you one cent.
FIRST KID—All right, you can have it, but you can't be allowed to wear it.
