ROOTERS CHEER LOGGER ELEVEN AS TRAIN GOES

When the old team left Tacoma for its game at Forest Grove last Thursday, they were given the most roaring send-off that they have ever given. Traffic and congestion were not allowed near the Union Station at all of the Logger "bleacher"-reared roots were heard.

The track left the depot on the wednesday afternoon, the coaches and cars being ready to go, and they drove into Union Station and then out to the depot again, where the railroad cars were waiting. The depot was crowded. The depot was crowded.

The game was played in the College of Puget Sound basketball court. The game was won by the Pacific Badgers with a score of 24-20. That Mother of Minc by J. C. S. B.

There is a very popular young woman who is often the topic of conversation in certain circles. She is well known for her remarkable ability to cook mincemeat. Born in Minnesota, she is the granddaughter of a famous mincer from the 1860s, and the secret of her success lies in the art of transforming fresh apples into a rich, dense filling for pies.

While at her beloved home in the countryside, she is often seen picking apples from her grandmother's orchard. With a deft touch, she slices them thin, allowing them to absorb the flavors of the spices and sugar perfectly. She then fills her beautiful new pie pan with these carefully prepared slices, placing them in a lattice pattern on top. The whole pie is then covered with the rest of the apples, creating a mouthwatering layer of flavor.

In addition to mincemeat pies, she has developed a unique recipe for apple crumble. By combining fresh apples with a blend of nuts and oats, she creates a crunchy topping that complements the sweet apples beneath. It's a recipe that has been inherited from her great-great-grandmother, and one that she treasures deeply.

The young woman's passion for mincemeat is not only a culinary talent, but also a family legacy. She is determined to carry on the tradition, preserving not just the taste, but also the history and love that are woven into each slice of apple.
