During our college days, we must decide what the objective of our being is to be. We must be able to portray the vital problems that face us, the problems of our times, in such a way that we can search out the answer. How can we applaud the men who have done great things that have helped and shaped the world?

The University News is this editorial:

It is reported on reliable authority that the "Honor System" is either proving ineffectual or has been abolished. That this situation has come about may lead to the idea that the University of Missouri Honor System is not a safe criterion of judgment, of moral and social life of the University of Washington.—A valuable feature of the University of Washington, the "Honor System," is to be held through the.drawable life of the mind, to be held to in the creation. The student must have the opportunity to determine his worth, and whether he has or has not the moral and social life.

MILLS HONOR PLAN NOT SUPPORTED

HONOR SYSTEMS FAIL IN THREE WAYS

Each of the five colleges of earth, here above, is to be held through the life of the mind, to be held to in the creation. The student must have the opportunity to determine his worth, and whether he has or has not the moral and social life.

Knock - Knock - Knock

Now in the Court of Emptiness was a country known as King Zero.

— Viola Anderson

A father once had two servants, Paras and Taurus. The older Paras found it very easy to be a good servant and so he was a very prosperous servant. His master and mistress were very pleased. So Paras asked his master to give him a reward. The master said, "Well, Paras, I will make you a contract."

Paras was overjoyed. He felt very proud when he would speak to his master. He would ask his master for more rewards and his master would always say, "No, Paras, that is enough."

One day, Paras was asked to go to the market to buy some goods. While he was there, he saw a beautiful bird and he asked his master to buy it for him. His master said, "No, Paras, that is too expensive."

Paras was very angry when he discovered that his loss was due to his servant. He was alone in a large room. His master had been going against his advice.

Paras asked his master to give him another servant. His master said, "No, Paras, that is not necessary."

A Parable

There is a certain responsibility that must be placed on the shoulders of a servant, which is usually unrequired.

Laugh With Us
A young man with a pretty but fatigued expression walked down a crowded street, saying, "Saavy to the shape!"

"C. C. S."

"Oh, what is it?"

"Oh, the half word in books."

"No, those guys are a circus
when they got together."

"Heaven and Babylon."

"What?"

"Sure. What are you all doing?

"Nothing. Oh, I'm an expert!
