GENERAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS WILL TAKE PLACE FEBRUARY 13

New Constitution Changes in Method of Nomination: Election Is Important in Many Ways

The annual general election of the associated students will be held Feb. 13. Slip of officials on the first assembly day of the annual semester will undoubtedly be the most interesting and important event on the campus. The arguments of student candidates is a greater interest than ever before because of the fact that it will be the first election under the new constitution. The election will therefore have the distinction of being the first to be held and will set the flavor for what is to come.

The rigid plan of conducting an election will be the most important for the student organization is yet in a forming stage and period of growth. In order to apprise the student body of the current state of affairs, and to whet the appetites of the new officials, all will be necessary. The candidates should have a chance to display their talents. In the new assembly, the student body will have the opportunity of making their choice.

SELECT COMMITTEES FOR NOMINATING

The nominating committee for the election of the new student body will be held Feb. 13. The members of the nominating committee, chosen by the Associated Students, will be:

- <|Committee Name|
- <|Member 1|
- <|Member 2|
- <|Member 3|

Any member of the Associated Students may be a member of the nominating committee. It is the function of the committee to interview all candidates and to present a list of the best qualified in the eyes of the Associated Students.

FLIGHTS OF POETY

Holly Trees Migrate To New Campus

Dear Fraternity,

Your letter lies before me, with its letter of welcome which a frater brought me a week ago. This I shall try to convey to you;

The welcome was genuine, and I thought my stuff was "awful rude." I mean your stuff was "awful rude." The things you say in your letters have your own particular flavor; the way you SPELL them, the way you PRINT them, the way you THINK them, is just so different.

I've never known a single instance where a WAGNER, "and a review of the opera" was written with such aplomb. It was a review, but the very style in which it was written was so impressive that the technical details of the opera are almost lost in the background. While it is true that not every element of the performance was perfect, the overall effect was one of heightened tension and dramatic intensity, which made for an incredibly pleasurable experience. I hope you can enjoy it as much as I did.

Yours sincerely,

The incidents lie in the common rut of daily life. It seems to me that the triumph of a man and the misfortune of the other are the only things of interest in this extraordinary life of this dramatic character. Even after having said all this, I think the play is far too strong for the stage, and I would not be willing to see it produced in such form as it is now. The play is very dramatic, and the situation is one that leaves a permanent stamp on the mind of the spectator. It is a very fine piece of work, and I think it will make a great success when it is produced.

ORIGINALITY

I have set my methods of drawing to react upon the concept of "Originality." My pen records these reactions in the forms and strokes which I have previously experienced, but they are not "my own." Are they? Despite the limitations of subject, the question is one of instruction drawn from the well of my own imagination, and the form in which it appears, is not from my lips, "Can there be anywhere near a reproach to put upon the action of the men in power, if the action of the men in power be that which the announcement was made. If one of you had come nearer to the truth in the days of Shaw and Kipling, and had your work been definitely endorsed, I think it would have become a law.

Mr. Coleman's "Use man who can best do the work for the University," we w ill lay our bets here and now that the three candidates have made an enviable record as a college President, and more particularly in the improvement of the physical plant. Mrs. Smith has been selected by the Mid-West Conference of Women to be the judge of the annual pageant of the college women. She has made a remarkable effort in the direction of increasing the number of students, and we are now to have a new gymnasium finished, this season. With our new gymnasium finished, this season, we will have an excellent exhibition of basketball, which will well repay us for our time. If this were not sufficient reason for attachment to other things under argument, that it has been pre-

J. — comes to school with a shining yellow shirt, the adopted colors of the Idaho students. But does J.— display a new style in clothes? Just as newspapers have been employed in the manufacture. He may be under some advice not to imitate the composer, chiefly to avoid the cost of the suit. The coach picks up, consequently or unconsciously, some good law, and plays provocatively. Bare, and one—yes—and devices a winning set of plays. Originality? Merely a recombinant of old ideas.

The above has been the unconscious attempt to prove that there is no pure originality in the actions and thoughts of man. Yet the evidence seems to vy toward that assumption. This article is not an attempt to prove it in the degree in which its originality is not entirely original because those fabrics have been used in other articles of clothing; it has been designed in imitation of other garments; the colors have been put into a similar shape by some Siouxs.

A certain deputi young fellow is a veritable social lion—he is a graceful, unassuming companion who can on the right fork, can he dance on his own feet; he tells a story in a way that everybody believes it, and he is unpretentious in all his fluidity. But again the answer is no; finding support of this idea in the world of advertising in literature, I reply that we have no idea of the degree that this, or any, young man in society or versed in the nuances of the language of society, is merely the result of his ability to mimic the manners of the world. The machine age is not entirely original because it is not entirely new.

The idea of copying has been concocted by of countless names in our colleges. "Oriental" does not mean a "Use man who can best do the work for the University." We heard it in the halls of our college. Mr. Smith has been selected by the Mid-West Conference of Women to be the judge of the annual pageant of the college women.
