Night Watchman Employed; Damage Estimated at $300

Three hundred dollars worth of damage done late Tuesday night in a 2-1 property in the last three weeks, according to Birrier Charles A. Robbins.

Three sections of the retaining wall in front of Jones Hall have been knocked down, necessitating not only the expense of replacement but also the added cost of maintaining a night watchman to guard the property.

"Someone, probably from outside of the college, has been indulging in malicious vandalism," said Mr. Robbins. "The Tacoma police are working on some slight clues, but as yet nothing definite has been discovered."

Three weeks ago, the first section of the wall was pushed over, a few days later a second section, and on January 31 the third piece was demolished. Authorities have said that it was only by deliberate action that the wall could have fallen.

The Walter Cut Stone Company is repairing the wall. New stones will not come in until April. Work is being rushed so that it will be done by next spring.

I have seen here a more beautiful railing than this one in all my travels in Puget Sound," architect is reported to have said.

Birrier Robbins emphasized the service that any student would do to the college and the city by reporting any imports that he may discover.
