Students Greet New Year With Mixed Apprehension

Hello in 1943! Some 300 students greet the new year in a mood far different from the hilarity that welcomed in 1942. This past week youth and activity were at a standstill, for conquest blood and tears have drawn a shadow over the immediate future. True, there were crowded cafeterias and student dormitories, but the student club was at a stand still for an evening of dancing and ushered out the old year at about 8:15. On the whole, there was a marked difference.

Frat boys are prouder than ever of their organization, which they feel will fare better in the waning days than in the weeks which were spent in saying “ ello!”. With the approaching crisis, the student body is more conscious than ever of its responsibility to the war effort. Change in the student body will be marked.

All is dark on the college horizon, however, perhaps 1943 will bring the turning point of the war. If the Allies push the Axis more and more, new horizons will open and victory, the ultimate goal will be in sight.

Where is the Pep of Basketball Rooters? Let’s Boost for Them

For perhaps the first time in the history of any college, a school has an outside booster club that is absolutely unconnected with the student body. Beside the student body, which does its best, they often fail to pull their weight. The student body must become more conscious of its responsibility to the war.

Enrollment will drop greatly, with many students graduating and being called to military service. Therefore, these activities will be sponsored, but the hope is that more time will be spent in these activities.

It may be playing favorites to give Browns a go in a series of basketball contests and saying that the Dummy club, in my opinion, is not up to par in the area. You and I, as students, are the only ones who are going to be treated fairly.

A number of things that are good, by which we have come, and which are going to make the future brighter, are also going to happen. The Brown is not a very good basketball team, and in addition to that, they are not doing as much as they should be doing.

The future of the club, in my opinion, is not as good as it should be. There are a few things that are going to happen, but they are not doing as much as they should be doing.
