

Relics, Remnants, and Religion: An Undergraduate Journal in Religious Studies

Volume 1 | Issue 1

Article 12

5-13-2016

Ocean Eyes

Rebekah Sherman

University of Puget Sound, rsherman@pugetsound.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <http://soundideas.pugetsound.edu/relics>

Recommended Citation

Sherman, Rebekah (2016) "Ocean Eyes," Relics, Remnants, and Religion: An Undergraduate Journal in Religious Studies: Vol. 1: Iss. 1, Article 12.

Available at: <http://soundideas.pugetsound.edu/relics/vol1/iss1/12>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Publications at Sound Ideas. It has been accepted for inclusion in Relics, Remnants, and Religion: An Undergraduate Journal in Religious Studies by an authorized administrator of Sound Ideas. For more information, please contact soundideas@pugetsound.edu.

Ocean Eyes

By Rebekah Sherman

a still December day,
clear and cold

opened wide

dark clouds gather on the horizon the only warning

but the moisture builds soon, there will be rain and when it falls, it will shatter the water's calm with years of pent-up thoughts and discontent

they are condemned
but they do not yet see they are sundresses and smirks, taunting the inevitable

I blink

the tide swells,
threatening to burst through never again, God swore

but I am my own Almighty and the doves,
caged in their roost,
cannot take flight

I am terrified of what I know will come

we are all damned, doomed to drown in the flood

there will be no olive branch not this time.